79. They are in different classes, but they work together.

第三节 角度一

Environmental protection is not just a slogan. It is part of my daily school life.

At school, I always start small. First, I bring my own water bottle to reduce plastic waste. Second, I sort waste carefully into recycling bins instead of throwing everything into one bin. Third, I turn off the lights and fans when I leave the classroom to save energy.

These small actions make a big difference. They help keep our school clean and teach me to care for the planet.

角度二

Last week, our school held an environmental week activity. I took part in making a waste-sorting poster with my classmate Lin Hao.

We spent two days drawing pictures and writing tips about recycling. At first, we argued about the design, but soon we worked together and finished the poster. When we hung it in the hallway, many students stopped to read it.

This activity taught me that teamwork makes tasks easier. More importantly, it showed me that everyone can help protect the environment in small ways. It was truly meaningful.
